Hannas blomsterpill & mönsterlek

Hanna Wendelbo

150x200, 184p

In Hanna's flower painting & play with patterns you learn a variety of techniques to capture each flower's unique beauty and how to combine flowers and leaves into patterns, colour combinations and mandalas.

That the interest in flower patterns was so great was beyond what Hanna Wendelbo could imagine when a few years ago she posted her first flower mandala on Instagram. In her book she now finally shares of her years of creative experience and pattern design using techniques such as watercolour, ink, felt-tip and gouache. In Hanna's flower painting & play with patterns you learn a variety of techniques to capture the unique beauty of each flower and how to bind flowers and leaves into patterns, colour combinations and mandalas. Of the patterns you create you can for example make your own collection of letter-writing paper, cards, envelopes and wrapping paper, or your own unique wallpaper. And no expensive materials are necessary, says Hanna, the key to beautiful patterns is not to be found in using exclusive sable-bristle paint brushes, but rather in playfulness and creativity.

Hanna herself lives and breathes patterns, in her garden the whole year through she finds inspiration for patterns, and several of the wallpaper patterns she has created for leading manufacturers such as Sandbergs and Borås Tapeter are already modern classics.

About the author

Hanna Wendelbo lives and breathes patterns, in her garden throughout the year she finds inspiration for patterns, and several of the wallpaper patterns she has created for leading manufacturers such as Sandbergs and Borås Tapeter are already modern classics.

Hanna Wendelbo lives with her family in a big house with a large and flourishing garden outside Kungsbacka. Hanna's world of patterns revolves around her garden and her work as a designer ends up on wallpaper, clothes, posters and even toilet paper.
